

ABSTRACT

A system and method for allocating bandwidth in a network node are described. Multiple data units are received along a plurality of virtual connections in a network, each virtual connection having a predetermined unit rate. The data units are subsequently stored. Finally, a data unit of the stored data units having a data unit rate higher than the predetermined unit rate of each virtual connection is transmitted at predetermined time intervals.

006227 264560